Feris Web Works Announces Cutting-Edge e-Commerce System

Temecula, California, June 26, 2006 Feris Web Works has announced a new online storefront system for businesses and individuals to use in marketing their own products or services on the Internet.

The new storefront system allows business owners to manage inventory and pricing by simply filling out a few fields and clicking a button. The system has a vast array of functions from special discounts and sales management, to searching, multi-language support, and many different payment mechanisms. Some of the other features included are support for multiple currencies, customer reviews of products, and owner control of all text and inventory listings.

“This is an amazing shopping cart system,” said Eric Feris, President of Feris Web Works. “Most business owners don’t want to become computer technicians or hire and supervise a programmer just to sell things on the Internet. With our storefront, anyone who can surf the Web can manage their own online store. And it’s really hard to find a more feature-rich and robust e-commerce product at our low $50 a month price.”

The system’s functionality can be adjusted to a business owner’s specifications. And Feris Web Works can provide complete look-and-feel makeovers so the store represents any business owner’s unique preferences and needs.
